Practice overview

Onyója is a leading junior and academic expert in international child and family law. She was a finalist for Rising Star – Barrister/Advocate of the Year in the Women in Law Awards 2020 and has been consistently ranked in the Legal 500 UK for children law since 2017. She regularly appears in the High Court (Family Division), at all levels of the Family Court and has argued before the Court of Appeal, in addition to instructions to give expert advice and reports in international proceedings. The Legal 500 2022 describes her as "very well-organised and well prepared for cases. She has a particular expertise in child abduction cases and has extensive knowledge in this area."

Alongside practice at the Bar, in 2014 Onyoja was awarded the prestigious Elphinstone PhD scholarship to undertake her doctoral research at the University of Aberdeen, examining domestic and family violence in the context of the Article 13(1) b) exception of the 1980 Hague Child Abduction Convention, supervised by Dr Katarina Trimmings and Professor Paul Beaumont. Her research included empirical work interviewing judges and Central Authorities in EU civil law and common law jurisdictions and Reunite, culminating in policy recommendations to the Hague Expert Working Group on Article 13(1)b) (chaired by the Rt Hon. Diana Bryant (Australia) with committee members including Lady Hale of Richmond), a paper at the 7th JPIL conference in Rio, Brazil and publication of part of her research in the leading peer-reviewed journal.

Onyója is a Post-doctoral Research and Teaching Fellow at the University of Aberdeen. She is also the appointed UK research assistant on the major collaborative EU funded POAM project with a core consortium: UK, Croatia, Germany and Italy, and points of contact in Spain, Serbia and Slovenia. She has published in peer-reviewed journals, delivered training, lectures and papers around the world on international family law, with a focus on child rights and gender equality issues.

International family law

Onyoja's expertise lies in cross border proceedings involving 1980 Hague and non-Hague child abduction cases, inter-country adoption (non-1993 Hague Convention) and the recognition of foreign adoptions, relocation, and other jurisdictional disputes including technical points of law such as forum conveniens and parens patriae jurisdiction. She has a strong international practice and is well known for this type of work, including instructions from abroad to provide English legal expert reports.

She has been involved in cases with significance such as the High Court decision that found three children stranded in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia for three and a half years to have no county of habitual residence or the English court's recognition of a Ugandan foreign adoption order which was adopted as precedent under Ugandan law in [MDK v NA \[2020\] EWHC 1548 \(Fam\)](#). She has advised pre-proceedings and successfully represented a 'left behind' father in his application under Art 11(6)-(8) Brussels IIa following a Hague non-return order made by the Court of Appeal in Poland. Uniquely complemented by her post-doctoral academic and research background, Onyoja has a natural ability to think creatively and approach multi-layered international cases with ease.

Children law (public)

Onyoja's core children act practice is in public law, regarded as an advocate "with great skill and care", "dealing thoroughly yet proportionately with the issues". She is forensic and particularly experienced in complex international care proceedings involving assessments and placements abroad, as well as cases involving honour based violence including the risk of death, FGM, missing children, child abuse and non-accidental injuries and domestic violence. She receives instructions to act for parents, relatives, children (through their guardians), the local authority and other intervenors, appearing in proceedings at all stages especially those involving vulnerable children and parents, in care and adoption proceedings; wardship applications - stranded spouse, forced marriage protection orders, FGM and other applications under the court's inherent jurisdiction.

Children law (private)

Onyoja accepts instructions in all applications made in respect of children under the Children Act 1989, particularly where there is an international element. Her breadth of practice involves representing clients in applications for a child arrangements order, specific issues, to vary or enforce contact and access, special guardianship, as well as applications for temporary or permanent leave to remove children from the jurisdiction to Hague and non-Hague convention countries. She has acted in cases that have presented issues of jurisdiction and habitual residence, as well as cases that encompasses injunctive relief for the family.

Human rights (GBV and child rights)

Onyoja's funded PhD by research focused on domestic and family violence in the context of 1980 Hague Convention proceedings, she has also undertaken assignments as UN volunteer for a grassroots charity combating GBV and VAWG in Papua New Guinea. Her ongoing work on the EU funded POAM project, has contributed to the drafting of the Best Practice Guide and Executive Summary on Regulation (EU) 606/2013 & the 1996 Hague Convention on protective measures for mothers against the backdrop of domestic violence, the UK national report, as well as presenting in Brussels, organising experts' local and international workshops, including as a trainer. Her well-rounded experience, both in policy and practice with an international dimension, makes her particularly skilled and knowledgeable in this area.

Private international law (Africa)

Onyoja has developed a family law practice that engages countries in Africa such as Nigeria, Ghana, South Africa, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Uganda, South Africa and Madagascar. She has written for the Africa Portal and has a strong interest in the development of the private international law of family law in Africa, especially Nigeria. She is a past committee member of the British Nigeria Law Forum, and inaugural chair of the Nigeria Group on Private International Law (NGPIL), an initiative that she spearheaded to bring together experts to improve PIL in Nigeria. She is currently developing international collaborative research to combat child trafficking in the context of inter-country adoption in Nigeria, with the aim of persuading Nigeria to adopt the international framework of the 1993 Hague Convention, as well as the other HCCH Children Conventions.
