Practice overview

Kevin is a specialist family law barrister with a very rounded knowledge of public and private family law. Having worked for over 13 years with leading local authorities Kevin brings a socio-legal understanding to family law not generally found at the Family Bar. Extremely hard working and dedicated to his clients, he is always in demand. Recent client comments include "Court went really well today and I was very pleased with the outcome. Kevin was brilliant and understood the situation immediately and I was very impressed with how he dealt and handled everything", "Kevin was AMAZING today – brilliant! He was able to get a grip quickly and kept this as on track as possible with missing bits of the bundle and parental tactics", "Thank you so much for all your work. You are a wonderful barrister and I felt confident you would represent me well and you did. Thank you again!", "I would just like to take this opportunity and say that both my client and I were very impressed with him. I was not in attendance on the day of the hearing, but our Paralegal was, who too sang his praises... I have questioned Jay why he had not previously put Kevin forward when I have called to book Counsel, but understand he is hardly available, [and his performance] perhaps explains this." and "Kevin Gordon was excellent today and we will be retaining him for future hearings".

Kevin began his career as a probation and aftercare officer in Jamaica. Through that work, he developed skills and an interest in working with children, and he is highly skilled at engaging with families and working for fair solutions. He is often instructed to represent mentally unwell and vulnerable clients to whom he brings a calm and reassuring approach. Trained in systemic therapy, Kevin has a solution-focused approach when working with clients and advocates alike.

Prior to coming to the Bar, Kevin danced professionally as a contemporary ballet dancer for 6 years. He is the lead choreographer and dancer during the annual Miscellany Production at Gray's Inn. He retains a commanding stage presence which he uses to great effect in court.

Kevin has a strong commitment to pro bono, and has been named on the inaugural Pro Bono Recognition List as someone who has given more than 25 hours of pro bono assistance in the last year.

Children law (public)

Kevin's professional background in local authorities in the capacities of frontline social work, senior social worker, team manager and consultant mean that he is particularly good at dealing with care proceedings, whether he is representing parents, guardians, children or the local authority. Social workers have commented that 'Kevin just gets it'. He is a pair of safe hands.

Kevin is experienced at managing and dealing with complex child protection cases (involving issues such as non accidental injuries, domestic violence, mental health, substance misuse, sexual abuse and others). He is often instructed to deal with non-accidental injury cases where there is a complex factual background, and multiple experts are involved. He also has experience of devising safeguarding programmes for assessing, reviewing and supporting families and protecting children, which is very valuable when assessing proposed care plans and arrangements for children.

Kevin has acted in applications for Forced Marriage Protection Orders, including one of the first cases for an order to be made in the family courts. He also has experience of deprivation of liberty applications for young people.

Children law (private)

Kevin is able to deal with all applications relating to residence and contact arrangements for children, including those which involve an international element. He is particularly skilled at handling child arrangement disputes and managing difficult clients including those who are vulnerable, suffering from mental illness and lacking capacity. He has been praised for his calmness and sensitivity when dealing with clients at times of high emotional stress.
